OLD TIMES AND OLD MEN. -In Foote's Sketches of Virginia, extracts from which are published in the Fredericksburg Herald, wo find the following reference to an old and excellent citizen of Fredericksburg, the father of the late Mr. Samuel Mark, of this place, whose family and descendants are still with us, and to whom this record of the virtues of their ancessociation adjourned.

tor will be grateful:-

"JOHN MARK still lives in Fredericksburg; his bones rest elsewhere; his impress is here. An emigrant from Ulster, that inexhaustible source of the best citizens, he came in his youth, alone, to America, high in hope, with a good conscience toward God and toward man, counting it honorable to stand firm for the church of his fathers. His five years of residence, in America, were in the great Valley of Virginia, and were prosperous and happy, employed first in the instruction of youth, and then in honorable traffic. As he advanced in years he came to this place to pursue his trade and brought along with him the religion he so carefully cherished in Shepherdstown, and nurtured it here, where practical godliness was less estcemed than at present. After repeated efforts, he at length obtained a minister of his own race and faith, from the mountains of North Carolina, trained in Lexington, Virginia, under that singularly gifted, simple-hearted man, George Baxter; and was the leading person of the three, who, as professors of religion, welcomed in 1806, the first Presbyterian preacher in Fredericksburg, the Rev. Samuel B. Wilson. Quietness, devotion, straightforward honesty in his business and his religion, and generosity in his piety, adorned him, and have graced the church he assisted his pastor to gather. Activity in benevolence is their praise. May it be so, forever!"
